Jim English, N.Y. Chapter:	Thanks for holding these weekly chats. They are one of the good things to have come out of this pandemic situation. Necessity in this case has become the mother of invention for these chats. I encourage you to continue them in some fashion we'll beyond this pandemic, as they are a great way for us to all share some great information.
Lisa T.:	Thanks for the support and encouragement for our Chestnut Chats. We do hope to continue them indefinitely, so stay tuned for future topics! I'll announce future ones at the end of this, but in case you have to hop off early, on June 12th Tom Saielli will lead "Finding and Identifying American chestnuts"; June 26, presenters' TBD, American chestnut reintroduction; July 10, ESF researchers Andy Newhouse and Linda Polin-McGuigan will lead a pollination workshop.
Stephen Hoy:	Good point, we tend to use paint markers that hold up for many years also
Lori Rizzo:	I don't see any pics of the tools...
Sara Fitzsimmons:	Hi Lori - He's showing these things in his screen with him, not in the powerpoint slide.
Lori Rizzo:	how do I get to that?
Lori Rizzo:	Afterwards, would love to see a list of recommended grafting tools, brands, and where to buy...maybe send as follow-up - thanks.
Sara Fitzsimmons:	Lori - you should be able to see his screen at the same time. If not, look up in the upper right-hand corner of your screen. you can swap the powerpoint and presenter screen.
Kendra Collins:	Lori - we have a handout on recommended grafting supplies we can share
